The Board of the American Planning Association, Oregon chapter has developed this updated Strategic Plan for delivering member services through 2015. While membership in the organization grew to 1,100 diverse planners from around the state, an increase of 30% from 2000 - 2008, there has been a significant decline in membership since then as a result of the recession. Through this Plan the Board seeks to maintain the services offered to our members, as well as to recalibrate chapter operations to meet the requirements of a leading professional organization in these challenging times.

APA Mission Statement

The American Planning Association is an independent, not-for-profit educational organization that provides leadership in the development of vital communities by advocating excellence in community planning, promoting education and citizen empowerment, and providing the tools and support necessary to meet the challenges of growth and change.

The 2010-2015 Strategic Plan is framed around the chapter’s core membership services, which are:

Professional Needs and Development. The focus is on providing services and resources to members that they require for professional needs and development.

Planning Advocacy. The focus is on outreach beyond the membership to promote planning and to advocate for a legislative framework conducive to good planning.

Organization Support. The focus is on providing “the right services”, using human and financial resources effectively, and promoting volunteerism in a manner that is rewarding and maintains momentum.

Primary Issues for 2010-2015.
While the Strategic Plan is organized around the three themes above, the following major issues have been identified for the 2010-2015 timeframe, and the strategies and actions will focus on addressing them.
21st Century Challenges for Planning. The Oregon Planning Program has been a major success for the state, and for the planning profession. But it is 37 years old and needs significant improvements. The biggest challenges are integrating sustainability principles and concepts into the state program and into planning practice generally, and making the delivery of planning decision-making and the funding of programs and projects more efficient at both the local and regional levels. OAPA needs to be at the forefront of the efforts to meet these challenges. The long term success of our profession depends on it.

Rebuilding and Engaging Membership. Membership has declined with planning budgets over the last two years. The amount of time and energy our members can devote to OAPA to support the profession and the practice of planning is limited. The diversity of the profession is still limited. To address these issues there needs to be a greater effort to re-build membership and to involve more planners in OAPA activities. In addition to OAPA statewide efforts, it is important to build regional capacity to engage planners and build professional development capacity throughout the state.

Broadening Advocacy. The means by which OAPA has advocated for the profession in the past are increasingly inadequate. Creating ways to engage our members in this effort should be a major priority for the organization. One way to accomplish that is to build ties with allied organizations to cross-pollinate and better integrate the work of related disciplines, and provide greater opportunities to promote planning advocacy and outreach.

Professional Challenges Amid Economic Uncertainty. The current economic climate challenges the profession in several different ways. OAPA needs to find the most effective means of supporting planners in accomplishing their work efficiently, and provide additional ways to efficiently obtain CM credits while continuing efforts to diversify the profession and educate the public about planning.
